OF A PORTION OF THE GAMBLERS

timent-Others Expiring of Their No-toriety-Tired of Their Vacation.

The crusade against the gamblers begin to tell. It was announced Thursday even ing that the McLure House poker roo had closed up. This report was yesterday nounced. Rumors are rife of the closing of other rooms, including George Wickham's, on the corner of Market and Eleventh streets, but while there has not been a game in this room this week, at least not at night, it is improbable that it has been closed with the intention of allowing it to stay closed. This is the oldest boker it to stay closed. This is the oldest poker room in the city in point of continuous operation and would naturally die hard. Its habitues, however, are among those who have been on a vacation for several not so extensive as it seemed. While there is scarcely one game a night, he says, the boys play all the afternoon. This plan avoids the "dead give away" of a light in the window. "The boys," said he, "are not afraid of the police; but they think maybe if they are known to be indulging in a little game somebody might swear out a warrant before a justice, and itnight get into the hands of a constable who wouldn't give us a tip in time to douse the glim and make ourselves scarce."

The association was rechristened the "Wheelassociation was recurristened the "wheeling Chamber of Commerce," and the Constitution was so amended as to admit to membership all the business men of the city who desire to become members for the furtherance of their common in-

The subject of the INTELLIGENCER'S cru-sade against the gamblers was introduced, and a number of speeches were made en-dorsing the course of the paper and of Mayor Grubb. Many of the members were very emphatic in their expressions of approval of the present agitation, and of condemnation of the do-nothing policy of the City Sergeant.

of the City Sergeant.

THE BUSINESS INTEREST.

Many of those present had season to appreciate the extent and evil tendency of the gambling plague. A prominent business man said yesterday that $10,000 or of the past year of business houses in this city through the dishonesty of employes who were led to stances. A gengral overhauling of the books and business is in progress by other firms, the investigation being directed to ascertaining whether other employes have been strictly honest.

Occasionally the story of the fall of some young man who becomes a slave to the vice of gambling and betrays the confidence of his employer becomes public through legal proceedings against the unifortunate victim of the gambling dens, but oftener the matter is hushed up, and nothing comes of it but the discharge of the offender. THE BUSINESS INTEREST.

A SIGNIFICANT FACT.

Several persons have been anxiously in ulring during the past two or three days, when the Intelligences proposes to cease directing the attention of Chief of Police Smith and that of the public to the high-handed manner in which gambling in this city has been carried on of late. These persons are fearful of what a grand jury may do and see a probability of a lot of indistruents being returned in when the INTELLIGENCER proposes to

Mayor Grubb says that on one of the occasions when he attempted to induce Chief of Police Smith to move against the gamblers, he addressed him in something like this manner:

"Mr. Smith, you are a candidate for reelection two years from now, and I am not. There's the ordinance which prescribes your duties and mine, and we have both sworn to discharge them. Now, if you think to do this thing will injure your chances of re-election, you go and discharge your duties as you have sworn to,
and tell your friends who keep these dives that I, as Mayor, have instructed you to pull them. Surely that lets you out. You can't want anything better than that."

"What did he say to that?" a reporter asked.

asked.

"He laughed in my face and turned on his heel," said the Mayor.

This puts Capt. Smith's conduct in a much worse light than anything that has before been printed concerning his evident but unexplained friendship for gamblers and keepers of gambling houses.

"Which one?"

"Which one?"

"Why, that interview with the distinguished member of Council from the Fourth ward who runs the 'Club House' on Market street."

"Frank Healy?"

"Yes; the idea of printing an endorsement of the course of the Clied of Police by one of the beneficiaries of his liberality to law-breakers! There's Healy, a member of Council, it is true, but look at his place; it's the most notorious in town. And the Register interviews him and prints his onlinon heside that of such men as Councilmen. the Forth Street M. E. Church, and several Gospel Hymns sung.

Mr. Murphy was introduced by Rev. G.
M. Shott, of the First Baptist Church, when the audience refused to give him an opportunity to say anything for several seconds by their hearty applause.

He advised all young men to beware of the social glass. That was invariably the root of all evil; cautioned young ladles against setting out the wine before young men when calling upon them, under the delusion that it makes them talkative. Throw aside the delusion and face the cold stern facts in the case; it makes them drunkards.

His remarks on old John Brown were His remarks on old John Brown were roceived with deafening applause. While the laws of the nation permitted this traffic in human souls there was a spirit burning within the bosom of God's people which said it was wrong, and one after another took up the cause and it was crushed, the shackles broken and four million souls made free. And so while the laws of the nation permitted the trafthe laws of the nation permitted the traf-fic in alcoholic liquors there is kindling in the hearts of the people a determina-tion to wipe the evil out, not by the bul-let, not by the ballot, and by a firm and determined stand by every man not to touch it. Sign the pledge, men. Join the army of the Lord, and the battlements will be so firm that King Alcohol with all his impe of hell, cannot prevail against them.

Mr. G. W. Baggs made a few remarks Mr. G. W. Baggs made a few remarks. He said it was no use for him to talk temperance after they had heard Mr. Murphy. But he would talk finance. He asked all who wanted Mr. Murphy to remain next week to raise their hands. The response was unanimous. "All right," he said, "the next thing is, can we raise the money?" "Yes," some one responded, and in fifteen minutes $138 was raised in the audience. A committee was raised in the audience. A committee was sent to consult Col. Charley Shay to secure the Academy of Music next week, if possible, and stch, arrangements were made as will probably there all of next week, with two meetings on Sunday week, which will be conducted by Francis Murphy or his son Edward. Since Edward hes been heard he is liked, and it makes little difference which one and it makes little difference which one speaks, as one has no "points" on the other.

An experience meeting will be held at the First Baptist Church to-night, where it is expected all those who have signed the pledge will take part.

Next Wednesday evening "Only a Farmer's Daughter" will be presented at the Opera House, by Miss Lillian Lewis, supported by a strong dramatic company. The play already has a high reputation here. The author is Mr. Elliott Barnes, for the past ten years identified with local theatricals in New York, and equally conversant with the demands of literary composition and the exigencies of the stage. These qualities are so seldom combined that a work of unusual attractiveness is the result. The sale of reserved seats will commence at Baumer's music store Monday morning.

There was no aunouncement made of days of July, 1837 Fash Cottrill, through 20th day of July, 1877. The marriage was an unhappy one, the couple living together but a few months. On the first day of July, 1882, Frank Cottrill, through his attorney, P. W. Morris, instituted proceedings for a divorce, on the grounds of desertion, against his wife. On the 14th of November Judge Stealey rendered a decree, granting the divorce. The action was resisted by the wife, and during the pendency of the suit, she filed a very curious answer.

have such a good time. I know you would enjoy swinging in a hammock under our broad-sweeping palm trees, listening to the song bird's merry warble. The myrtle and the ivy are not yet in bloom, but we have lovely rink parties. Don't you wish you had a baker's dozon of our oranges, fresh from the tree?

Charley has just brought me some beautiful ones and is now sitting on the floor, tailor-fashion, splitting them open with a hatchet. You see they came near being caught by the late frost of last winter. We have plenty of cream, for our milkman melts the ice so as to get water for his cows. But strawberries are a little backward this year. Oh, Laura, dear, I wish you had been here this morning. I was sitting in my bed chamber looking out on the river, and there the picture-que crocodile for which, you know, our Southland is famous, was quietly sunning himself on the further bank, and wicked boys were pelting him with great chunks of ice. I think it is too bad. I have been out this afternoon to look at my ig trees, but they are not doing as well as I would like, though my pineapples are real nice. I don't know how you live in cold New York where, I hear, the thermometer is very backward this year.

Write soon. Your loving

DAISV.

P. S.—Charley says I must tell you that there has been a real typhoon raging in this city for the past week, and the jagged end of it struck him, whatever that may mean. At any rate he says he finds a linen duster very comfortable.

but who were present last night merely as lookers-en, Nearly all of the coetumes worn were new. They were all pleasing and many of them, original and effective. The ladies in particular were prattily costumed and several expensive dresses were worn. The scene presented on the surface was at all times attractive, and frequently there were outbursts of applause from the sudience. General skatting was the order of the evening, with the exception of the usual grand march and a march for gentlemen exclusively. The session was prolonged until 11 o'clock, and even then the people were to the others. It was an event of which the rink management may well by proud, and one that will long be referred to with pleasure by those who were there.
